Presentation Overview

- What are HFAs?
- What roles do they play in state government?
- What short- and long-term opportunities exist for housing innovation in Delaware?
- How can DSHA and its diverse housing partners work together?

HFAs, Quick and Dirty

- Emerged in 1960s as state response to urban housing crisis
- Quasi-independent public agencies
- Financially self-sufficient

- As of 2004:
 - $192 billion for 2.4 million home loans
 - $55 billion for 687,000 multifamily units
 - 1.7 million units through LIHTC

Major Roles of HFAs

Opportunities for Delaware: Short-term Innovations

In this time of fiscal crisis, a focus on prioritizing & tweaking existing programs is most prudent.

- Target existing resources to populations in most immediate, acute need
- Make incremental adjustments to existing policies & programs to achieve goals quickly

Opportunities for Delaware: Long-term Innovations

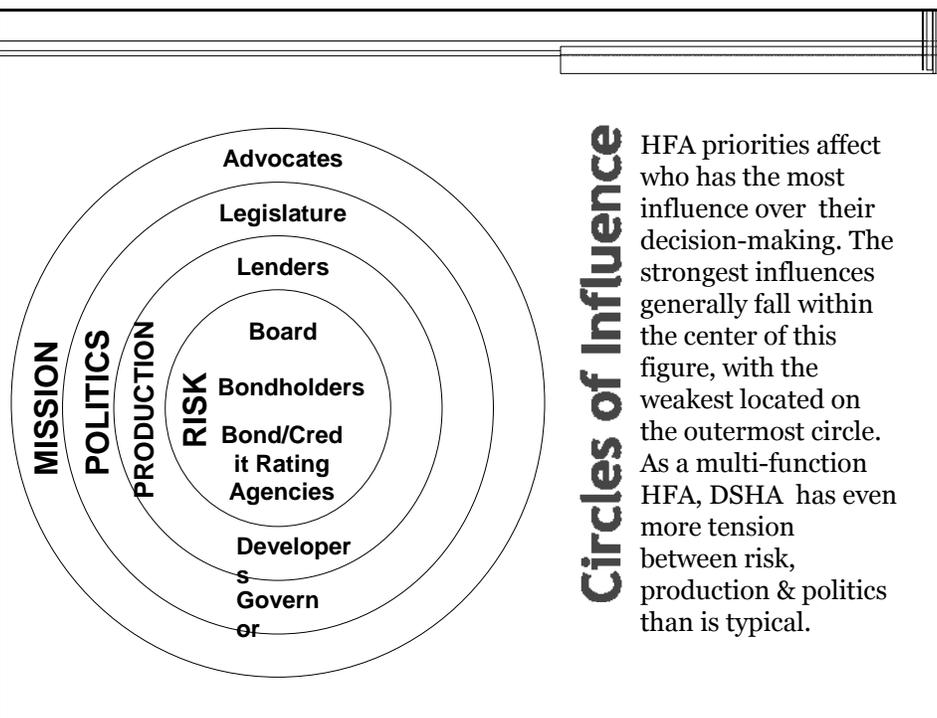

Think more strategically, comprehensively about DSHA & state housing goals

- Agency structure/functions: costs & benefits
- Comprehensive state housing plan
 - Provides goals & priorities to shape future policies and programs
 - Establishes transparency & predictability
 - Develops accountability through evaluation
 - Enables effective coordination between agencies
 - Fosters ownership among diverse partners

Interest Group Compatibilities with HFA Priorities

INTEREST GROUPS	HFA PRIORITIES
	Risk-Averse	Production-Oriented	Politically-Engaged	Mission-Driven
Advocates	-	-	-	+
For-Profit Developers	-	+	-	-
Non-profit Developers	-	+	-	+
Lenders	O	-	-	-

Note: “-” means priority is lower for interest group; “+” means it is higher for interest group; “O” means that it is relatively the same for both the interest group and the HFA.

Opportunities for Delaware: Influencing Innovation

- Draw upon strengths of different housing partners
- Find more common ground & build upon it
- Embark upon a multi-interest housing campaign to raise awareness of housing issues statewide
- Push for more “radical” policy innovation based on state housing needs, but understand constraints based on financial risk.
